BILIOUSNESS AND CONSTIPATION CURED BY THEDFORD'S BLACK-DRAUGHT

Because the liver is neglected people suffer with constipation, biliousness, headaches and fevers. Colds attack the lungs and contagious diseases take hold of the system. It is safe to say that if the liver were always kept in proper working order, illness would be almost unknown.

Thedford's Black-Draught is so successful in curing such sickness because it is without a rival as a liver regulator. This great family medicine is not a strong and drastic drug, but a mild and healthful laxative that cures constipation and may be taken by a mere child without possible harm.

The healthful action on the liver cures biliousness. It has an invigorating effect on the kidneys. Because the liver and kidneys do not work regularly, the poisonous acids along with the waste from the bowels get back into the blood and virulent contagion results.

Timely treatment with Thedford's Black-Draught removes the dangers which lurk in constipation, liver and kidney troubles, and will positively forestall the inroads of Bright's disease, for which disease in advanced stages there is no cure. Ask your dealer for a 25c. package of Thedford's Black-Draught.

misfortunes. To be a convict of one's free will, to protect the maid of one's love from grief, was one thing, but to sit in the stocks, exposed to the jibes of a common crowd, was another. And more than aught else, I felt the sting of the comedy in it.

To sit there with my two feet straight out, soles to the people, through those rude holes in the boards, and all at liberty to gaze and laugh at me, was infinitely worse than to welter in my blood upon the scaffold. How many times, as I sat there, it came to me that if it had been the scaffold, Mary Cavendish could at least have held my memory in some respect; as it was, she could but laugh. Full easy it may be for any man with the courage of a man to figure in tragedy, but try him in comedy if you would prove his mettle.

Shortly after I arrived there in the New field, which was a wide, open space, the sports began, and I saw them all as in a dream, or worse than a dream, a nightmare. First came Parson Downs, whispering to me that as long as he could do me no good, and was in sore need of money, and, moreover since he would by so doing divert somewhat the public attention from me, he would enter the race which was shortly to come off for a prize

Then came a great challenge of drums, and the parson was in his saddle and the horses off on the three mile course, my eyes following them into the dust clouded distance and seeing the parson come riding in ahead to the winning post, with that curious uncertainty as to the reality which had been upon me all the morning—that is, of the uncertainty of aught save my shameful abiding in the stocks.

As I said before, it was a hot day, and all around the field waved fruit boughs nearly past their bloom, with the green of new leaves overcoming the white and red, and the air was heavy with honey-sweet, and, as steady as a clock tick, through all the roaring of the merrymakers came the hum of the bees and the calls of the birds. A great flag was streaming thirty feet high, and the gay dresses of the women who had congregated to see the sports were like a flower garden, and the waistcoats of the men were as brilliant as the breasts of birds, and nearly everybody wore the green oak sprig which celebrated the Restoration.

Then again the horses, after the challenge of the drums, sped around the three mile course, and attention was diverted somewhat from me. There had been mischievous boys enough for my torment, had it not been for my brother John, who stood beside the stocks, his face white and his hand at his sword. Many a grinning urchin drew near with a stone in hand and looked at him and looked again, then slunk away and made as if he had no intention of throwing aught at me. After the horse racing came music of drums, trumpets and hautboys, and then, in spite of my brother, the crowd pressed close about me and many scurrilous things were said and many grinning faces thrust in mine, and thinking of it now, I would that I had them all in open battlefield, for how can a man fight ridicule? Verily it is like dueling with a man of feathers. Quite still I sat, but felt that dignity and severity of bearing but made me more vulnerable to ridicule. Utterly weaponless I was against such odds.

I was glad enough when the drums challenged again for a race of boys, who were to run one hundred and twelve yards for a hat. Everybody turned from me to see that, and I watched wearily the straining backs and elbows of the little fellows, and the shouts of encouragement and of triumph when the winner came in smote my ears as through water, with curious shocks of sound.

Then ten fiddlers played for a prize, and while they played the people gathered around me again, for races more than music have the ability to divert the minds of English folk. But they left me again when there was a wrestling for a pair of silver knee buckles. I remember to this day, with a curious dizziness of recollection, the straining of those two stout wrestlers over the field, each forcing the other with all his might and each scarce yielding a foot, and finally ending the strife in the same spot as where begun. I can see now those knotted arms and writhing necks of strength and hear those quick pants of breath, and again it seems as then, a picture passing before my awful reality of shame. Then two young men danced for a pair of shoes, and the crowd gathered around them, and I was quite deserted and could scarcely see for the throng the rhythmic flings of heels and tosses of heads. But when that sport was over and the winner dancing merrily away in his new shoes the crowd gathered about me again, and in spite of my brother clods of mud began to fly, and urchins to tweak at my two extended feet.

Then that happened which verily never happened before nor since in Virginia, and can never happen again, because a maid like Mary Cavendish can never live again.

Slow pacing into the New field in that same blue and silver gown which she had worn to the governor's ball, with a wonderful plumed hat on her head, and no mask, and her golden hair flowing free, behind her Catherine and Cicely Hyde, like two bridesmaids, came my love, Mary Cavendish.

And while I shrank back, thinking that here was the worst sting of all, like the sting of death, that she should see me thus, straight up to the stocks she came and gathering her blue and silver gown about her made her way in to my side and sat there, thrusting her two tiny feet, in their dainty shoes, through the apertures next mine, for the stocks were made to accommodate two criminals.

And then I looked at her and would have besought her to go, but the words died on my lips, for in that minute I knew what love was and how it could 'er not only the tragedy, but that which is more cruel, the comedy, of life. Surely no face of woman was ever like Mary Cavendish's as she sat there beside me, with such an exaltation of love which made it like the face of an angel. Not one word she said, but looked at me, and I knew that after that she was mine forever, in spite of my love, which would fain shield her from me lest I be for her harm, and I realized that love, when it is at its best, is past the consideration of any harm, being sufficient unto itself for its own bliss and glory.

But presently I, looking at her, felt my strength failing me again, and her face grew dim and she drew my head to her shoulder and sat so facing the multitude, and such a shout went up as never was.

And first it was half derision, and Catherine and Cicely Hyde stood near us like bridesmaids, and my brother John kept his place. Then came Madam Judith Cavendish in a chair, and she was borne close to us through the throng and was looking forth with the tears running over her old cheeks and extending her hands as if in blessing, and she never after made any opposition to our union.

Then came blustering up Parson Downs and Ralph Drake, who afterward wedded Cicely Hyde, and the two Barrys, who had braved leaving hiding, and the two black wenches who dwelt with them, one with a great white bandage swathing her head, and Sir Humphrey Hyde, who had just been released and who, while I think of it, wedded a most amiable daughter of one of the burgesses within a year. And Madam Tabitha Story, with that mourning patch upon her forehead, was there, and Margery Key, with—marvelous to relate in that crowd—the white cat following at heel, and Mistresses Allgood and Longman with their husbands in tow. All these, with others whom I will not mention, who were friendly, gathered around me, the while Mary Cavendish sat there beside me, and again that half derisive shout of the multitude went up.

But in a trice it all changed, for the temper of a mob is as subject to unexplained changes as the wind, and it was a great shout of sympathy and triumph instead of derision. Then they tore off the oak sprigs with which they had bedecked themselves in honor of the day, and by so doing showed disloyalty to the king, and the militia making no resistance, and, indeed, I have always suspected, secretly rejoicing at it, they had me released in a twinkling, and foremost among those who wrenched open the stocks was Captain Calvin Tabor. Then Mary Cavendish and I stood together there before them all.

It was all many years ago, but never hath my love for her dimmed, and it shall live after Jamestown is again in ashes, when the sea birds are calling over the sunset waste, when the reeds are tall in the gardens, when even the tombs are crumbling, and maybe hers and mine among them, when the sea gates are down and the water washing over the sites of the homes of the cavaliers. For I have learned that the blazon of love is the only one which holds good forever through all the wilderness of history, and the path of love is the only one which those that may come after us can safely follow unto the end of the world.

A Great Opportunity

A contract has been closed with the Los Angeles Times which gives us the exclusive right to offer our subscribers their Illustrated Weekly Magazine at a price that barely covers the cost of mailing that publication. The value of our arrangement will be fully appreciated by those who take advantage of the offer we make in this week's issue and send for a sample copy of the magazine which will be mailed free of charge to any of our readers.

We believe the offer we are making marks an epoch in the history of newspaper publishing and we feel convinced that our subscribers who read the announcement which appears in this paper will acknowledge that no better opportunity of obtaining good reading matter at regular weekly intervals for a year was ever presented.

The character of the magazine is such that it will appeal to those who enjoy all that is wholesome and good in literature. Its contents is made up from the writings of the best newspaper correspondents and contributors and embraces every subject of moment and interest. Each number contains 28 to 32 large pages which, if made into the magazine of average size, would necessitate the use of 120 pages. Two well known correspondents whose work has attracted wide attention and favorable comment are regular contributors to the Illustrated Weekly Magazine, and their letters alone are worth the price asked for the publication. Frederic J. Haskin, who is at present traveling through Central and South America, writes intelligently and interestingly of the countries through which he is journeying and of whose resources and attractions we know practically nothing. Frank Carpenter, the famous interviewer, is another journalist whose letters appear regularly in the magazine, and when it is known that the combined contributions of these two writers require less than a twelfth of the space given to reading matter in The Times publication, the value of the opportunity we are giving our readers is apparent. Popular descriptive sketches, solid articles, short stories, poetry, pictures, fashion chats, health discussions and bright miscellany forms an important part of the contents of a magazine that can be obtained by our subscribers at a small cost.

Write or call for full and complete information which will be gladly and promptly furnished.

MAILED FIST IN EVIDENCE.

American Get-There Business Methods Not Liked in Germany.

Berlin, Jan. 10.—Germany's uncompromising hostility to organized American commercial enterprise in her markets has again been displayed in a manner calculated to cause a sensation in interested quarters when the facts are known. Ambassador Tower was anxious to accept the invitation to the annual banquet of the American chamber of commerce of Berlin January 30th. When he mentioned his intention to Baron von Richthofen, the foreign secretary, that official declared the givernment's attitude toward the chamber of commerce was more hostile than ever. He added that Ambassador Tower's attendance at the banquet would "embarrass the the government." Tower thereupon notified the chamber that he would be unable to be present.

Ever since its organization, the chamber has been under the ban of the kaiser's officials, who have declined to recognize it in any form, and have even refused it a corporate charter, such as is obtainable by even the most insignificant organizations. They gave as their objection that chambers of commerce, under the German law, are semi-official bodies, and that the Americans are therefore sailing under false colors. Forty per cent of the chamber's membership is German.

LISTENED TO STORY OF DEFEAT

GENERAL STOESSEL AMAZED AT DEFEAT OF SLAV ARMS.

Headquarters of the Japanese Third Army at Port Arthur, Jan. 6, via Yinkow and Tientsin, Jan. 10.—Five thousand men of the Russian garrison at Port Arthur were marched from the village of Yahutsul on the shores of Pigeon bay, for fifteen miles to the railway station at Changlingtzu this afternoon. The first detachment arrived at Changlingtzu at 3 o'clock and the other detachment followed soon after. Each detachment was accompanied by six loaded transport carts.

The long procession of the remnants of the gallant Russian garrison was a pathetic spectacle. The first arrivals at Changlingtzu were four droskies, drawn by sorry looking horses. They contained the staff officers who had refused to give their parole. All wore their swords, as they were allowed to do under the terms of the capitulation compact.

A few minutes later the first detachment arrived. The regimental officers marched with their men, their heads bowed and their faces seamed with lines showing the result of the mental and physical strain they had undergone during the long defense.

As the Japanese soldiers crowded about them with evident curiosity the faces of the Russian officers was an interesting study. All of them appeared to feel their humiliating position keenly, and though some seemed to be resigned to their situation, others were resentful at being regarded with curiosity.

The horses drawing the transport carts were staggering with fatigue, though the loads were small. They were tied to the carts and led by orderlies.

The prisoners were treated with the greatest respect and kindness, though they were regarded with much natural curiosity. The soldiers were given food, cigarettes and beer and the correspondent of the Associated Press even saw Japanese soldiers voluntarily carrying the effects of the prisoners when they were overcome by fatigue.

Surprised at Story of Russian Defeat.

Headquarters of the Japanese Third Army at Port Arthur, Jan. 7, via Yinkow and Tientsin, Jan. 10.—On the evening of January 3 Captain Tsunoda, a Japanese staff officer, was sent to Port Arthur to inform General Stoessel of the contents of the message from the emperor of Japan to General Nogi, giving instructions that the garrison should be treated with the greatest consideration.

Captain Tsunoda took with him a present for the Russian commander, consisting of chickens and wine, which the general accepted. Soessel's first inquiry was as to the whereabouts of General Kuropatkin. Tsunoda replied that he did not know exactly, but that he understood he was somewhere about Mukden. Stoessel said he had last heard from Kuropatkin on October 6, when the commander of the Manchurian army said he would soon come to the relief of Port Arthur. He had, he stated, sent out Chinese spies, who on their return reported that Kuropatkin with a relieving army was at Kinchow, twenty miles to the north of Port Arthur.

Stoessel listened with evident incredulity to the statement that Kuropatkin had been defeated and driven back toward Mukden, so the captain produced a map which showed the respective positions of the Russian and Japanese armies near the Shakhe river. He recited the story of Kuropatkin's defeat and said that the Russian losses had been between 50,000 and 60,000. Stoessel expressed his amazement and then quietly remarked that he had been misled.

The general asked where the Russian second Pacific squadron was, and was told that some of the ships had not yet passed the Cape of Good Hope. With a hopeless expression General Stoessel said: "Now that Port Arthur has fallen there is no use of the squadron coming further."

The real cause of the war, in General Stoessel's opinion, was the ignorance of the Russian people regarding the fighting qualities of the Japanese.

After his conference with General Nogi, General Stoessel expressed his gratification at meeting "so pleasant a gentleman." He had not, he said, expected the considerate treatment which had been accorded him. He declared that General Nogi appeared to him as an old friend, rather than as the commander of the army which had forced him to surrender.

Strength.

Strength is one of the distinguishing attributes of a healthy man. In one of the most beautiful poetic flights known to literature, the inspired singer finds no finer figure to express the sun's majestic rising than "rejoicing like a strong man to run a race."

Who has not known such a man, the picture of health, hardy and athletic, suddenly begin to fail? At first he has a slight cough, which he laughs at. Presently the cough becomes deep seated. The scales tell him he is losing flesh. A little later and the lungs bleed. He grows weaker and more and more emaciated. Each day sees some circumscribing of his activities, until at last he does not leave the house, and friends shake their heads and say, "Poor fellow! Who would ever have believed it possible?"

But what are the doctors doing all this time! Doing their best probably, but usually doing no lasting good. The emaciation grows more marked, the weakness more apparent, until at last the sick man hears the sentence, "There's no hope."

It is just at this very point of hopelessness that the use of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery has proven the first step to health to many a sufferer. It cures the cough, stops the hemorrhage, heals the lungs, puts sound flesh upon the body, and sends the man back to the activities of life as strong as ever. It's a wonderful statement, but it is literally true, that "Golden Medical Discovery" has cured time and time again when all other means had absolutely failed to benefit.

There is no alcohol in the "Discovery," and it is absolutely free from opium, cocaine, and all other narcotics.

Persons suffering from disease in chronic form are invited to consult Dr. R. V. Pierce, by letter, free. All correspondence is private and the confidences of the sick are guarded with professional privacy. The success of the methods and medicines of Dr. R. V. Pierce, may be inferred from the fact that of the thousands treated by him and his assistant staff of nearly a score of physicians ninety-eight per cent. have been perfectly and permanently cured.

"A SURE CURE."

"I beg to state that I have used three bottles of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery since my correspondence with you, and find great improvement in my case," writes Mr. A. F. Novotny, of New York, N. Y., Box 1437. "I feel that I am in need of no more medical assistance. When I started to take your medicine I had a regular consumptive cough, of which I was afraid, and everybody cautioned and warned me concerning it. I was losing weight rapidly, was very pale and had no appetite whatever. Now my condition is changed entirely. I do not cough at all, have gained eight pounds in weight, have recovered my healthy color, and my appetite is enormous. I can recommend your medicine to everybody who may be in need of the same, as it is a sure cure, no humbug as are most other patent medicines, and is far superior to all similar medicines."

THE DOCTOR WAS WRONG.

"When I commenced taking your medicines, eighteen months ago, my health was completely broken down," writes Mrs. Cora L. Sunderland, of Chaneyville, Calvert Co., Md. "At times I could not even walk across the room without pains in my chest. The doctor who attended me said I had lung trouble and that I would never be well again. At last I concluded to try Dr. Pierce's medicines. I bought a bottle of 'Golden Medical Discovery,' took it, and soon commenced to feel a little better, then you directed me to take both the 'Golden Medical Discovery' and the 'Favorite Prescription,' which I did. Altogether I have taken eighteen bottles of 'Golden Medical Discovery,' twelve of the 'Favorite Prescription' and five vials of 'Pellets.' I am now almost entirely well, and do all my work without any pain whatever, and can run with more ease than I could formerly walk."

Dr. Pierce's Common Sense Medical Adviser, 1008 large pages and 700 illustrations, is sent free on receipt of stamps to defray expense of mailing only. Send 31 one-cent stamps for the book in cloth binding, or only 21 stamps if paper covers are desired. Address Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y.

ANYBODY who uses arms and is equipped with the "STEVENS" has the assurance that his choice cannot be improved upon. There is absolutely no guesswork about the "STEVENS;" they look right because made right, and for their particular purposes are positively unexcelled. No wonder, then, that have been adopted in preference to all others—the world around!
